CLYDE RAYMOND SPENCER,

Petitioner,

v.

JOSEPH KLAUSER, et al.,

Respondents.

CASE NO. C94-5238RJB

REPORT AND RECOMMENDATION

Petitioner seeks habeas relief under 28 U.S.C. § 2254. Petitioner is in the custody of the Washington Department of Corrections pursuant to his 1985 Clark County convictions by guilty plea for seven counts of Statutory Rape in the First Degree and four counts of Complicity to Statutory Rape in the First Degree. Petitioner was sentenced to two life terms plus a consecutive term of 171 months imprisonment.

Respondents move for summary judgment and petitioner cross-moves for summary judgment, or in the alternative, for an evidentiary hearing. For the reasons discussed below, I recommend the Court grant respondents' motion, deny petitioner's motion, and deny the petition.

GROUND FOR RELIEF

Petitioner presents the following grounds for habeas relief:

1. Conviction obtained by plea of guilty not made voluntarily with understanding of the nature of the charge and the consequences of the plea.
2. Conviction obtained by plea of guilty which was unlawfully induced.
3. Conviction obtained by the unconstitutional failure of the prosecution to disclose evidence favorable to the defendant.
4. Conviction obtained through denial of effective assistance of counsel.

(Docket 1 at 5-6.)

Respondents acknowledge that petitioner presented these claims to the Supreme Court of Washington and has therefore exhausted his state court remedies as to these claims. (Docket 12 at 9.)

DISCUSSION

Involuntary Guilty Pleas

"The test for whether a defendant is competent to plead guilty is whether 'mental illness has substantially impaired his or her ability to make a reasoned choice among the alternatives presented and to understand the nature and consequences of the waiver.'" United States v. Lewis, 991 F.2d 524, 527 (9th Cir.) (quoting Chavez v. United States, 656 F.2d 512, 518 (9th Cir. 1981)), cert. denied, 114 S.Ct. 216 (1993). Due Process requires a state trial court to employ procedures designed to protect against the conviction of an incompetent. Hernandez v. Ylst, 930 F.2d 714, 716 (9th Cir. 1991). A competency hearing, however, is not

1 required absent a "substantial" or "bona fide" doubt of 2 competency. Id.

3 A good faith doubt about a defendant's competence
4 arises if there is substantial evidence of incompetence.
5 . . . There are no particular facts which invariably 6 signal incompetence, but important factors which merit a 7 judge's attention include: irrational behavior, demeanor
8 before the trial court, and available medical evaluations.

9 Lewis, 991 F.2d at 527

10 The opinion of counsel as to a client's competency is not 11 determinative, but "a defendant's counsel is in the best position 12 to evaluate a client's comprehension of the proceedings."
13 Hernandez, 930 F.2d at 718.

14 Petitioner entered Newton/Alford pleas, denying that he 15 committed the offenses, and claiming he had no recollection of any 16 event with which he was charged. (Docket 2 at 11.) He now claims 17 that when he attended the plea change hearing, he was suffering 18 from clinically-diagnosed major depression and was under the 19 pharmacological effects of Xanax, Elavil and sodium amytal. (Id.
20 at 9.) Petitioner claims the medications he took significantly 21 interfered with his mental functioning at the time of his entry of 22 the pleas, and that the psychiatric testimony at the plea hearing 23 focused on his competency at the time of the crimes rather than at 24 the time he entered his pleas.

25 Petitioner admits that "[t]hroughout the plea colloquy, there 26 was no mention made to the trial judge of [petitioner's]
27 psychiatric history including suicide attempts and hospitalization

REPORT AND RECOMMENDATION

1 for depression, his current diagnosis of major depression at the 2 time of the plea, or the medication regimen that he was taking at 3 the time of the plea." (Docket 2 at 25-26.)

4 At the plea hearing, the trial court carefully reviewed the 5 plea agreement with petitioner and inquired into his understanding 6 of its terms. (Docket 12, ex. 4 at 7-41.) The court specifically 7 considered petitioner's competence to enter guilty pleas. When 8 petitioner stated that he was pleading guilty without admitting 9 guilt because he could not remember committing the crimes, and 10 that testing had not revealed whether he was suppressing the 11 memories, the court asked defense counsel if there was a defense 12 based upon petitioner's capacity. (Id. at 19-20.) Counsel stated 13 that petitioner was examined by two psychiatrists who both 14 concluded "that [petitioner] has his full capacity about him."
15 (Id. at 20.) The court asked petitioner if "any alcohol or drugs 16 [were] involved or anything that might have affected your mental 17 capacity." (Id.) Petitioner responded, "No, sir." (Id.)
18 Petitioner agreed that based upon the doctors' evaluations and 19 opinions, and upon counsel's advice, he believed he could present
20 no legal defenses to the charges. (Id.)

21 The court asked petitioner if he felt that he was adequately 22 represented by counsel and if he believed counsel made a maximum 23 effort to explore both mental and factual defenses to the charges.
24 (Id. at 35.) Petitioner said yes. (Id.) Petitioner indicated he 25 had no questions about his representation, and he believed counsel

26 REPORT AND RECOMMENDATION

1 adequately, fairly, and on his behalf presented to him his options
2 relative to pleading guilty versus going to trial. (Id. at 35-3 36.)

4 The court again inquired into petitioner's mental capacity.
5 (Id. at 38-40.) The court asked counsel if petitioner was 6 competent and able to assist counsel in his defense. (Id. at 39.)
7 Counsel stated, "Yes, sir, he's cognizant of the charge against 8 him and to the best of his recollection he's been able to assist 9 me." (Id.) Petitioner, upon court inquiry, agreed with counsel's 10 statement. (Id.) The court reviewed the qualifications of the 11 two psychiatrists who examined petitioner, and the number of times 12 they each met with petitioner, and concluded that petitioner's 13 pleas were made freely and voluntarily, with a full and 14 intelligent understanding of the potential consequences. (Id. at 15 39-41.)

16 The court's inquiry into petitioner's mental state, and review 17 of the entire transcript of the plea hearing, indicate that the 18 trial court had no evidence before it which should reasonably have 19 caused it to doubt petitioner's competence. Petitioner does not 20 claim otherwise. Rather, petitioner claims that federal habeas 21 relief should be granted based upon information presented in this 22 habeas action and to the trial court nearly one year after 23 sentencing, in a motion to vacate petitioner's guilty plea.

24 Petitioner relies upon Steinsvik v. Vinzant, 640 F.2d 949 (9th 25 Cir. 1981), and Boag v. Raines, 769 F.2d 1341 (9th Cir. 1985),

26 REPORT AND RECOMMENDATION

1 cert. denied, 474 U.S. 1085 (1986) for the habeas court's 2 authority to consider evidence regarding competence even though 3 the evidence was not presented to the trial court prior to 4 sentencing. The Boag court stated:

5 In a habeas proceeding, a petitioner is entitled to an 6 evidentiary hearing on the issue of competency to stand 7 trial if he presents sufficient facts to create a real and substantial doubt as to his competency, even if those facts were not presented to the trial court.

8 Id. at 1343. The court further noted:

9 In cases finding sufficient evidence of incompetency, the 10 petitioners have been able to show either extremely erratic and irrational behavior during the course of the 11 trial, e.g., Tillery v. Eyman, 492 F.2d 1056, 1057-58 (9th
Cir. 1974) (defendant screamed throughout the nights, 12 laughed at the jury, made gestures at the bailiff, disrobed in the courtroom and butted his head through a 13 glass window), or lengthy histories of acute psychosis and psychiatric treatment, e.g., Moore v. United States, 464 14 F.2d 663, 665 (9th Cir. 1972) (defendant repeatedly hospitalized for acute mental illness and hallucinations).

15 Id.

16 In support of his incompetency claim, petitioner submits his 17 own declaration in which he states that the prescribed drugs did 18 not appear to alleviate the feeling of desperation and depression 19 which he felt throughout his confinement, and that these drugs
20 "affected [his] ability to enter into a free and voluntary plea."
21 (Docket 12, ex. 6F at 10.)

22 Petitioner also submits a letter from Dr. Lawrence Halpern, 23 Ph.D., an Associate Professor in the Department of Pharmacology at 24 the University of Washington School of Medicine. (Docket 2, ex.
25 28.) Dr. Halpern reviewed petitioner's medical records from The

1 Oregon Health Sciences University (id. at ex. 6), the Clark County
2 Jail records indicating medications dispensed to petitioner (id.
3 at ex. 16), declarations by petitioner and by his cell-mate, John 4 Pearce (id. at exs. 1, 29), and letters from the two psychiatrists
5 who examined petitioner (id. at exs. 10, 30). Dr. Halpern opines 6 that the high dose and ineffectiveness of Sinequan prescribed for 7 petitioner (as evidenced by the doctor's decision to switch to 8 another anti-depressant, Elavil) indicates the severity of 9 petitioner's depression. Dr. Halpern notes that the observations 10 of declarants indicate that petitioner was confused, depressed, 11 and non-communicative. (Id., ex. 28.) Dr. Halpern concludes that 12 symptoms of petitioner's severe depression would have kept 13 petitioner from intelligently participating in the preparation of 14 his defense. (Id.) He adds numerous possible side effects of the 15 prescribed anti-depressants, including confusion, sedation to the 16 point of coma, hallucinations, and motor-retardation. (Id.)

17       Petitioner also claims that the sodium amytal he was given two 18 days before his change of plea hearing has a half-life of 70 to 19 250 hours before it is eliminated from the body, and that it can 20 potentiate the effects of the antidepressants he was also taking.
21 (Docket 2 at 15-16.)

22       Assuming the truth of the evidence submitted by petitioner, as 23 is required when considering the non-movant's evidence on a motion 24 for summary judgment, petitioner demonstrates that he was taking 25 medications which affected his mental state, and that he was

1 depressed, confused, and withdrawn. These responses, however, are 2 not surprising or unusual given the fact that petitioner was 3 charged with sixteen sex offenses involving his children, neither 4 he nor counsel knew of any defense to the charges, and they 5 believed a jury hearing the evidence would convict petitioner.
6 Petitioner's demeanor and behavior did not cause the court or 7 counsel to conclude that petitioner was not competent to make 8 reasoned choices. Furthermore, the psychiatrists who examined 9 petitioner gave no indication that petitioner was not competent to 10 assist in his defense or to understand the charges against him and 11 the import of his guilty pleas. The evidence does not show either 12 that petitioner exhibited extremely erratic and irrational 13 behavior during the plea hearing or sentencing hearing, or that he 14 has a lengthy history of acute psychosis and psychiatric 15 treatment.

16 I recommend, therefore, the Court find that no evidentiary
17 hearing is required because petitioner fails to present sufficient 18 facts to create a real and substantial doubt as to whether he was 19 able to make a reasoned choice among the alternatives presented to 20 him at the plea hearing, and to understand the nature and 21 consequences of his guilty pleas. Accordingly, I recommend the 22 Court grant respondent's motion for summary judgment as to 23 petitioner's claim for habeas relief based upon his claim that his 24 guilty pleas were not knowing and voluntary; and that the court 25

26 REPORT AND RECOMMENDATION

1 deny petitioner's cross-motion for summary judgment or for an 2 evidentiary hearing on this issue.

3 Unlawfully Induced Guilty Pleas

4 "The longstanding test for determining the validity of a 5 guilty plea is 'whether the plea represents a voluntary and 6 intelligent choice among the alternative courses of action open to 7 the defendant.'" Hill v. Lockhart, 474 U.S. 52, 56 (1985). In 8 order to be valid, a guilty plea "cannot be the result of threats, 9 misrepresentations, or improper promises." United States v.
10 Anderson, 993 F.2d 1435, 1437 (9th Cir. 1993).

11 "In assessing the voluntariness of the plea, statements made 12 by a criminal defendant contemporaneously with his plea should be 13 accorded great weight. Blackledge, 431 U.S. at 73-74, 97 S.Ct. at 14 1628-29. Solemn declarations made in open court carry a strong 15 presumption of verity." Chizen v. Hunter, 809 F.2d 560, 562 (9th 16 Cir. 1986).

17 Petitioner claims that his guilty pleas were not voluntary 18 because they were unlawfully induced by Sgt. Michael Davidson of 19 the Clark County Sheriff's Office. Petitioner claims that after 20 he was arrested and while he was being held in Clark County Jail 21 and was represented by counsel, Sgt. Davidson repeatedly visited 22 petitioner despite petitioner's objections, and finally was 23 directed by jail staff to stay away from petitioner. Petitioner 24 claims Sgt. Davidson repeatedly tried to convince him to confess 25 and to plead guilty, emphasizing the traumatic effect a public

1 trial would have upon petitioner's children. Petitioner states it
2 was later learned that Sgt. Davidson was romantically involved
3 with petitioner's wife at the time of the investigation. (Docket 4 2 at 28.) Petitioner does not claim that Sgt. Davidson made any 5 threats (predictions of the effects of trial on petitioner's 6 children are not threats), misrepresentations, or improper 7 promises.

8 Petitioner admits that the transcript of the plea hearing does 9 not provide evidence of coercion. (Id.) At the hearing, the 10 court asked petitioner if anyone made any threats or promises of 11 any kind, except those discussed at the hearing. (Docket 12, ex.
12 4 at 16.) Petitioner said no. (Id.) Petitioner acknowledged at 13 the hearing that he had no defense to the charges, that a jury 14 hearing the evidence would convict him, and that he was entering 15 the guilty pleas to eleven counts in exchange for the 16 prosecution's agreement to drop five additional counts in the 17 Second Amended Information. (Id. at 18-34.)

18 The Court of Appeals of Washington considered petitioner's 19 claim that his pleas were coerced, and held: "Petitioner's own 20 statements, the benefit of his plea agreement, and the lack of a 21 defense outweigh petitioner's assertion that his plea was 22 coerced." (Docket 2, ex. 26 at 3.)

23 I recommend the Court find that, assuming Sgt. Davidson's 24 uninvited visits occurred as alleged by petitioner, the visits do 25 not constitute unlawful coercion of petitioner's guilty pleas.

1 Accordingly, I recommend the Court grant respondent's motion for 2 summary judgment as to petitioner's claim that his guilty pleas
3 were coerced, and that the Court deny petitioner's cross-motion 4 for summary judgment or for an evidentiary hearing.

5 Failure to Disclose Exculpatory Evidence

6 Petitioner claims the prosecution failed to disclose, in 7 violation of Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83 (1963), results of 8 medical examinations of two of petitioner's victims. The 9 undisclosed examination reports indicate that no physical evidence 10 of anal or vaginal penetration was found. Petitioner claims 11 "[t]he failure to disclose this evidence is constitutionally 12 significant despite the fact that the charges to which petitioner 13 pled guilty do not require any more than slight penetration" 14 because the failure to disclose "may have affected petitioner's 15 decision" to enter a guilty plea. (Docket 2 at 33.)

16 The Ninth Circuit held that a habeas petitioner's nolo 17 contendere plea precluded him from challenging alleged 18 constitutional violations that occurred prior to entry of that 19 plea on matters which did not challenge the authority of the state 20 to hale petitioner into court and did not challenge the knowing 21 and voluntary nature of the plea. Ortberg v. Moody, 961 F.2d 135, 22 137-38 (9th Cir.) (citing Tollett v. Henderson, 411 U.S. 258 23 (1973)), cert. denied, 113 S.Ct. 225 (1992). Respondent claims 24 that under Ortberg, petitioner cannot raise a Brady claim after 25 entering a guilty plea. (Docket 12 at 16-17.)

26 REPORT AND RECOMMENDATION

1 Respondent, however, claims that the failure to disclose
2 exculpatory evidence renders petitioner's guilty plea unknowing
3 and involuntary, particularly because in the entry of an Alford
4 plea, evaluation of the evidence is critical. (Docket 14 at 13.)
5 Ortberg and Tollett do not preclude a habeas challenge to the 6 knowing and voluntary nature of a plea. Petitioner must therefore 7 show more than a failure by the prosecution to disclose
8 exculpatory evidence. He is entitled to relief only if the Court 9 finds that petitioner's pleas were not knowing and voluntary 10 because there is a reasonable probability that disclosure of the 11 withheld evidence would have caused petitioner to choose to 12 proceed to trial. See Miller v. Angliker, 848 F.2d 1312, 1320 13 (2nd Cir.) (a person challenging the validity of a guilty plea who 14 claims that exculpatory information has been withheld from him is 15 entitled to relief only if there is a reasonable probability that, 16 had the evidence been disclosed, the result of the proceeding
17 would have been different) (citing United States v. Bagley, 473 18 U.S. 667 (1985)), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 890 (1988).

19 At the plea hearing, the State outlined the evidence it would 20 present if petitioner went to trial. (Docket 12, ex. 4 at 21-35.)
21 That evidence included testimony by the three minor victims and 22 their mothers. The five witnesses corroborated each others'
23 statements, and most of the sex acts upon which the convictions
24 are based were witnessed by two or more of the children. (Id.)
25 The description of the witnesses' expected testimony is lengthy

1 and detailed. (See id.) Even accepting petitioner's 2 characterization, the withheld medical reports did not establish 3 the absence of any penetration. They only failed to provide 4 evidence of such penetration. I recommend the Court find there is 5 no reasonable probability that disclosure of the withheld medical 6 reports indicating no physical evidence of anal or vaginal 7 penetration of two victims would have caused petitioner to proceed 8 to trial on all sixteen charges rather than to plead guilty to 9 eleven charges. Accordingly, I recommend the Court grant 10 respondent's motion for summary judgment as to petitioner's claim 11 that the state's withholding evidence of two medical reports 12 rendered his guilty pleas unknowing and involuntary, and that the 13 court deny petitioner's cross-motion for summary judgment or for 14 an evidentiary hearing on this claim.

15 Ineffective Assistance of Counsel

16 A habeas petitioner's claim that he was denied effective 17 assistance of counsel requires application of a two-part test.
18 Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. 668, 687 (1984).

19 First, the defendant must show that counsel's performance 20 was deficient. This requires showing that counsel made 21 errors so serious that counsel was not functioning as the 22 "counsel" guaranteed the defendant by the Sixth Amendment.
23 Second, the defendant must show that the deficient
24 performance prejudiced the defense. This requires showing 25 that counsel's errors were so serious as to deprive the 26 defendant of a fair trial, a trial whose result is 27 reliable.

24 Id.

26 REPORT AND RECOMMENDATION

1 When considering the first prong of the Strickland test, 2 judicial scrutiny of counsel's performance must be highly 3 deferential. Id. at 689. "Because of the difficulties inherent 4 in making the evaluation, a court must indulge a strong 5 presumption that counsel's conduct falls within the wide range of 6 reasonable professional assistance; that is, the petitioner must 7 overcome the presumption that, under the circumstances, the 8 challenged action 'might be considered sound trial strategy'."
9 Id.; United States v. Steele, 785 F.2d 743, 750 (9th Cir. 1986).

10 The second prong of the Strickland test requires a showing of 11 actual prejudice related to counsel's performance. In order to 12 satisfy the "prejudice" requirement in a challenge to guilty pleas 13 based on ineffective assistance of counsel, the defendant must 14 show there is a reasonable probability that were it not for 15 counsel's errors, defendant would not have pleaded guilty and 16 would have insisted on going to trial. Hill v. Lockhart, 474 U.S.
17 52, 59 (1985). The Supreme Court stated in Hill that "the concern 18 that unfair procedures may have resulted in the conviction of an 19 innocent defendant is only rarely raised by a petition to set 20 aside a guilty plea." Id. at 58 (quoting United States v.
21 Timmreck, 441 U.S. 780, 784 (1979)).

22 [W]here the alleged error of counsel is a failure to 23 investigate or discover potentially exculpatory evidence, 24 the determination whether the error "prejudiced" the 25 defendant by causing him to plead guilty rather than go to trial will depend on the likelihood that discovery of the evidence would have led counsel to change his recommendation as to the plea. This assessment, in turn,

1 will depend in large part on a prediction whether the 2 evidence likely would have changed the outcome of a trial.
 3 Similarly, where the alleged error of counsel is a failure 4 to advise the defendant of a potential affirmative defense to the crime charged, the resolution of the "prejudice" inquiry will depend largely on whether the affirmative defense likely would have succeeded at trial. Id. at 59

5 The Court in Strickland stated there is no need for a court to 6 address both components of the inquiry if an insufficient showing 7 is made on one component. Strickland, 466 U.S. at 697.
 8 Furthermore, if both components are to be considered, there is no
 9 prescribed order in which to address them. Id.

10 Petitioner claims five grounds for concluding that counsel was 11 constitutionally ineffective:

- 12 1. Failure to advise petitioner of the sentencing judge's 13 known practice of imposing the maximum sentence on sex offenders who have not admitted guilt.
- 14 2. Inaccurate advice concerning possible legal sentences.
- 15 3. Failure to investigate petitioner's mental condition and 16 competence to plead guilty.
- 17 4. Failure to investigate the charges.
- 18 5. Failure to file pre-trial motions challenging the admissibility of child hearsay.

19 (Docket 2 at 39-48.)

20 Failure to Advise: Petitioner claims that counsel's 21 assistance was constitutionally ineffective because counsel did 22 not advise petitioner that the sentencing judge's known practice 23 was to sentence sex offenders to the maximum possible term if they 24 had not admitted guilt. (Id. at 39-42.) At sentencing, the court 25 stated:

1 [M]y record with respect to the treatment effects of sex 2 offenders is very consistent. Those that do not admit get the 3 maximum term, because that's the only thing I can do in good 4 conscience because we know, those who deal in this, you, Mr.
 5 Rulli, Mr. Peters and myself, all the people that deal in this 6 regularly, all of the experts say without treatment these 7 people will reoffend. So to me it's a very easy decision. No 8 treatment, maximum, that's my responsibility to the community.

9 . . . Maximum on everything because I can't have Mr.
 10 Spencer or any other sex offender back in the community 11 knowing he's going to reoffend, and I always recommend the 12 maximum-minimum in every sex case I have sent up without 13 an admission. . . .

14 I have also always added a rider to that. If there's 15 treatment within the system and he receives it and 16 completes the treatment, then he should be reconsidered.

17 . . .
 18 Now, the fact that you're a police officer has 19 nothing to do with my position in this case, because if 20 you go back and check the cases, you'll find out that I'm 21 very consistent in this.

22 (Docket 12, ex. 4 at 59-61.) Petitioner claims counsel was 23 ineffective because counsel advised petitioner to plead guilty in 24 exchange for dropping five counts, but the maximum sentence would 25 have been the same for the sixteen original counts as for the 26 eleven counts on which petitioner entered guilty pleas. (Docket 27 2 at 40.)

28 The record of the plea hearing indicates petitioner was 29 properly advised of the maximum sentences the court could impose 30 before he entered his pleas. (See docket 12, ex. 4 at 16-18, 35.)
 31 The court specifically noted that it could go outside the standard 32 sentencing range, either above or below, and that the court does 33 not have to follow any recommendation with respect to the

34 REPORT AND RECOMMENDATION
 35 PAGE -16-

1 sentence. (Id. at 17-18.) The court added that even if the 2 prosecutor recommended the minimum within the sentencing range,
3 the court could still sentence petitioner to the maximum. (Id.)

4 The Ninth Circuit held that an erroneous sentencing prediction
5 by counsel does not invalidate a guilty plea. United States v.
6 Oliveros-Orosco, 942 F.2d 644, 646 (9th Cir. 1991). The Ninth 7 Circuit also held that a district court did not abuse its 8 discretion in denying a motion to withdraw a guilty plea where the 9 defendant was not told that the judge's policy was not to grant 10 probation to anyone guilty of a drug offense in Yosemite National 11 Park. United States v. Johnson, 760 F.2d 1025 (9th Cir. 1985).
12 The court of appeals stated the judge could have varied his policy 13 in a particular case if he were persuaded that he should. Id. at 14 1026.

15 Counsel did not give erroneous information concerning 16 sentencing. At most, counsel failed to accurately predict where 17 in the lawful sentencing range the court would decide to sentence 18 petitioner. Johnson and Oliveros-Orosco preclude a finding that 19 counsel's failure to advise petitioner of the sentencing judge's 20 policy on sentencing sex offenders was outside the wide range of 21 reasonable professional assistance. Petitioner's claim of 22 ineffective assistance of counsel based on counsel's failure to 23 accurately predict imposition of the maximum sentences thus fails.

24 Inaccurate Advice: Petitioner claims he received ineffective 25 assistance of counsel because counsel advised him that if he

1 entered guilty pleas, he would go to Western State Hospital for 2 treatment. At the sentencing hearing, counsel moved for referral
3 of petitioner to Western State Hospital for evaluation. Counsel 4 stated that the Sexual Offender Statute of the SRA could be 5 interpreted to allow the referral. (Docket 12, ex. 4 at 53.) The 6 court denied the motion, noting that the intent of the legislature 7 was that anyone who receives a term greater than six years is not 8 eligible for treatment. (Id.)

9 At the plea hearing, the court and the prosecutor advised 10 petitioner that the sentences on counts one and two were twenty 11 years to life imprisonment, and that the upper sentencing range on 12 the other counts was 171 months. The court specifically advised 13 petitioner that the court was required to sentence petitioner to 14 not less than 20 years confinement, and up to life imprisonment.
15 (Docket 12, ex. 4 at 16-18.) Petitioner told the court the plea 16 bargain was not based on any commitments by the prosecutor other 17 than a recommendation that petitioner be sent to the Department of 18 Corrections. (Id. at 15.) After these discussions, petitioner
19 entered guilty pleas. (Id. at 35.)

20 At sentencing, a discussion of treatment of petitioner at 21 Western State Hospital followed the court's denial of a motion for 22 evaluation there. Counsel for petitioner said:

23
25
26 REPORT AND RECOMMENDATION

1 [W]hen the offer was made for three counts and being sent to 2 Western State, before my client had an opportunity to accept 3 the offer, the information about these other matters had come 4 up and it was revoked.

5 (Id. at 58.)

6 The record indicates, therefore, that although petitioner was 7 originally told treatment was available to him at Western State
8 Hospital, the offer was revoked when additional charges were filed 9 against him. Petitioner stated in open court that he had been 10 promised only that five counts would be dropped and he would be 11 committed to the Department of Corrections if he entered guilty
12 pleas to the other eleven counts. When the court denied referral 13 to Western State, petitioner did not attempt to withdraw his 14 guilty pleas or object that he had been misled. This record 15 indicates no basis for finding that counsel's advice was outside 16 the wide range of reasonable professional assistance.

17 Failure to Investigate Petitioner's Competence to Plead 18 Guilty: Petitioner claims that counsel was constitutionally 19 ineffective because he did not adequately investigate petitioner's 20 competence to plead guilty and did not advise the court of 21 petitioner's mental health history or that petitioner was taking 22 prescription anti-depressant drugs at the time of the plea
23 hearing. (Docket 2 at 43.)

24 Counsel, however, arranged to have two psychiatrists examine 25 petitioner prior to the plea hearing. Although the focus of both

1 psychiatrists was whether petitioner had a mental health defense
2 to the charges, neither psychiatrist indicated a doubt about 3 petitioner's competence to assist in his defense or his ability to 4 understand the charges against him. Counsel and the court 5 discussed petitioner's competence:

6 Counsel: Dr. Dixon related to me that my client did not 7 suffer from any mental diseases.

8 Court: And is competent and able to assist you in his 9 defense?

10 Counsel: Yes, sir, he's cognizant of the charge against him 11 and to the best of his recollection he's been able 12 to assist me.

13 Court: Do you agree?

14 Petitioner: Yes, Sir.

15 (Id. at 39.)

16 Dr. Dixon states in his report that he examined petitioner 17 four times. (Docket 2, ex. 10.) Dr. Dixon reported that he 18 "attempted to develop some understanding of [petitioner's] current 19 mental status and his understanding of a variety of charges which 20 had been brought against him . . . . (Id.) Dr. Dixon stated that 21 petitioner "understood most of the allegations" and Dr. Dixon 22 ascertained that [petitioner] did not appear to present evidences 23 of severe disturbance of his mental status . . . . (Id.)

24 I recommend, therefore, the Court find that, assuming the 25 truth of the facts presented by petitioner, counsel's conduct in 26 investigating petitioner's competence falls within the wide range 27 of reasonable professional assistance.

29 PAGE -20-

1        Failure to Investigate the Charges: Petitioner claims that 2 counsel was constitutionally ineffective because he stated in 3 court that if the case proceeded to trial, he would call no 4 defense witnesses and would present no defense to the charges.
 5 (Docket 2 at 43.) Petitioner claims the testimony of the children 6 was subject to impeachment on several bases, and that interviews 7 with the children were subject to rebuttal.

8        The impeachment and rebuttal suggested by petitioner, however, 9 were not precluded by counsel's statement that he would not call 10 witnesses or present a defense. The impeachment of witnesses and 11 interviewers, rebuttal of reports, etc. would have occurred on 12 cross-examination. Counsel indicated to the court that if the 13 case went to trial, he could only put the State case "to its 14 test." (Docket 12, ex. 4 at 34.) I recommend the Court find that 15 counsel's decision to put the State to its test rather than to 16 pursue an affirmative defense is a decision within the wide range 17 of reasonable professional assistance and a decision that might be 18 considered sound trial strategy.

19        Failure to File Pre-trial Motions Challenging Admissibility of 20 Child Hearsay: Petitioner claims counsel was constitutionally 21 ineffective because he did not file pre-trial motions challenging 22 the admissibility of child hearsay statements under RCW 9A.44.120
 23 to limit the State's case at trial. (Docket 2 at 46-48.)

24        If petitioner chose to proceed to trial, the children 25 themselves were expected to testify, thus minimizing or

1 eliminating the value of determining the admissibility of child 2 hearsay statements. Petitioner stated at the plea hearing that he 3 believed the children were sufficiently competent to testify.
4 (Docket 12, ex. 4 at 22-23.) Counsel told the court he had no 5 doubt that the jury, if presented the evidence the State had,
6 would convict petitioner. (Id. at 21.)

7 Under these circumstances, there is no reasonable basis upon 8 which to conclude that counsel's decision not to file pre-trial
9 motions to determine the admissibility of child hearsay statements 10 was outside the wide range of reasonable professional assistance.
11 I recommend, therefore, the Court find that, assuming the facts 12 are as presented by petitioner, petitioner fails as a matter of 13 law to establish that counsel's representation was 14 constitutionally ineffective. Accordingly, I recommend the Court 15 grant respondent's motion for summary judgment as to petitioner's 16 claim of ineffective assistance of counsel and that the Court deny 17 petitioner's motion for summary judgment or for an evidentiary 18 hearing on this issue.

CONCLUSION

For the reasons discussed above, the Court should grant respondent's motion, deny petitioner's motion, and deny the petition. A proposed order accompanies this Report and Recommendation.

DATED this 15 day of November, 1994.
